Questions and Answers Regarding Fee Based Accounts:

1. How is the fee calculated? What is the billing schedule for the Paragon Program?

The fee is calculated on a quarterly basis, by the negotiated rate multiplied by the total value of the client assets in the plan on the last day of the quarter. The billing schedule includes March, June, September and December.

2. Is the client fee pro-rated from the start date?

Yes, the client fee will be pro-rated from the first full month of the Paragon Program.

3. How do I open an IPC Paragon Account?

The procedure is similar to opening other accounts with IPC Securities Corporation. The Paragon Account Application Form and the New Client Account Application Form must be completed. Please contact an IPC Investment Advisor for more information.

4. Can the client negotiate a new rate at a future date?

Yes, the client can negotiate a new rate but a new Paragon application would have to be completed. The billing cycle will start fresh from the new plan start date.

5. What is the minimum equity requirement to open a Paragon account? Do multiple related Paragon accounts let you deviate below the minimum requirements?

The minimum equity requirement is $25,000. It is at the discretion of IPC Securities Corporation, to review exceptions to the minimum requirements.

6. What happens to the fee calculation if the equity grows dramatically?

The calculation stays the same on both the flat rate model and the tiered rate model. Only the fee value changes accordingly based on the total equity. On a tiered rate model the calculation changes to include a weighting for the new pricing constant.

7. How does the fee billing work with multiple related accounts? Does the charge apply to one or all accounts?

The accounts are charged separately as if the accounts are all independent.

8. Are registered plans charged a trustee fee for fee based accounts?

All Paragon accounts that are registered plans are charged a trustee fee according to the IPC Securities Corporation fee schedule.

9. Can the client invest in all different types of securities in the Paragon account?

Yes, but there are some exceptions. The client should review the types of products he/she would like to purchase with their IPC Investment Advisor.

10. Where can I find the different fee rates?

The rates can be reviewed and negotiated with your IPC Investment Advisor.

*IPC Paragon Account is a non-discretionary brokerage account. While there are no minimum account fees for the IPC Paragon Account, in some cases additional fees and expenses may be incurred, including charges for terminating the account in the first year; large block trades, or handling charges and/or exchange fees. For a complete discussion on terms and conditions, please see the IPC Paragon Account Client Agreement or contact your IPC Securities Investment Advisor. The IPC Paragon Account is designed for investment purposes and is not intended for day trading or other excessive trading activity as defined by IPC Securities Corporation at its own discretion. Many of IPC Paragon Account services and advice are available through commission-based relationships, subject to other charges where applicable. Certain investments including but not limited to new issues, mutual funds and limited partnerships should be sold through prospectus only, which includes additional information on risks, charges and expenses. Investors must read the prospectus carefully before investing. IPC Securities Corporation does not provide tax or legal advice. Consult with your tax and legal advisors regarding your individual needs related to these matters.
